

Humans normally live in sodium equilibrium.

The kidney excretes exactly as much sodium as the body absorbs.

Think of the kidneys as perfectly accurate atomic balancing machines

Every segment of the nephron is involved in sodium reabsorption.
Proximal tubule Thick ascending limb of the loop of Henle Distal convoluted
And each segment is targeted by a unique class of diuretic.	